Bullying is one of several factors that put immense strain on LGBT teens' mental health. Fear of rejection from family members, anti-LGBT messages heard in places of worship and in the media, and the chronic stress associated with having a stigmatized and often hidden identity all serve to exacerbate the mental health problems affecting LGBT

Studies have established a clear link between a family's rejection or acceptance of an LGBT young adult and that person's long-term mental and physical health.

LGBT youth as a whole are significantly more likely than their non-LGBT counterparts to experience depression, anxiety, suicidal thoughts
